CUPE wants leaders to apologize

PAUL MCLEOD

CUPE leaders are demanding apologies from Stephen McNeil and Karen Casey over allegations the union conspired with the provincial government in recent contract talks.

But the opposition leaders are refusing to back down. CUPE was re-sponding to a story in Friday's edition of Metro that quoted Liberal Leader Mc-Neil and Tory Leader Casey saying the Stephen union and the NDP McNeil government faked tough contract negotiations that ended early last week for health-care workers and school support staff outside the Halifax region. McNeil said union Casey leadership and government used rank and file members as "pawns" in the talks. Casey said the whole thing was "a game." CUPE issued a strongly worded release Friday demanding the leaders recant their statements.

"Stephen McNeil has some gall. You do not become the biggest union in the country, with 600,000 members, without having the utmost integrity and character. How dare he suggest otherwise," CUPE Atlantic regional director Jacquie Bramwell said. "Neither Stephen Mc-Neil nor Karen Casey speak on behalf of our members and it is outrageous in the extreme to be making these kinds of inflammatory and inaccurate statements."

CUPE Nova Scotia leader Danny Cavanagh said the leaders' statements demonstrate "a profound ignorance of collective bargaining" and CUPE "is demanding a full and immediate apology from both these leaders."

Liberal and Pro-gressive Conserva-tive officials confirmed yesterday both leaders are standing by their comments.

Last week, McNeil questioned how a contract with education workers could be worked out after a few hours of negotiations when the two sides hadn't been at the table for months.

"Something's up," he concluded.

Casey said both sides knew since the fall that unions would get the pay parity they were seeking, but "wanted to appear to be letting the process work itself through."

The NDP has denied the charges. One government official joked not only did they collaborate with unions, but Elvis led the bargaining team.

The premier was not available Friday for comment on published remarks by Newfoundland and Labrador Premier Danny Williams who is worried the deal will give Quebec a "stranglehold" over electricity exports from eastern Canada.

On Wednesday, when the revised deal was announced, Dexter said it appeared to address concerns raised by the Atlantic premiers around access to New Brunswick's power grid. Still in its infancy, the Y2E project will need the co-operation and financial support of local businesses and youth organizations to get off the ground, said Hall. Several of those stakeholders were on hand for the project's launch Friday.

FISHERIES Nova Scotia's opposition Liberals maintain the province's conflict of interest commissioner has left questions on the table concerning their attempt to have Fisheries Minister Sterling Belliveau reprimanded over the sale of his fishing boat and gear.

The Liberals alleged Belliveau was in a conflict of interest because the buyer of his gear was also trying to get a loan from the Fisheries and Aquaculture Loan Board, which the minister oversees.

But in a letter about 10 days ago, retired judge Merlin Nunn dismissed a request for a fresh look at the case and scolded the Liberals, saying "Mr. Belliveau ... acted with full integrity."

The commissioner also made it clear he was unhappy about the possibility his office's reputation could be brought into question, even by inference.

Liberal Leader Stephen McNeil said Friday that was never his party's intent.

"He (Nunn) followed up by telling us he has information that no one else has ... those questions and the answers that he may think he has, the public want to know and we are asking him to answer them in a public forum," McNeil said.

Several of the older children flashed bright white smiles at the cameras as they peered above their blankets.

The arrival marks the start of a new life for the children who have not only survived the deaths of their parents but the near-de-struction of their country.

Immigration Minister Jason Kenney said officials were expecting upwards of 50 kids on the flight, but there were logistical and orphanage staff problems on the ground in Haiti.

There are 90 children already cleared to come to Canada, and another 90 being fast-tracked through the immigration system.

He said the government hopes to have the vast majority of children in Canada within a few days.

White House adviser David Axelrod told CNN's State of the Union that whatever the source, the message "contains the same hollow justification for the mass slaughter of innocents.

State Department spokesman P.J. # Respite from the February blues t's the time of year when our snug pants serve as the only reminder of those reminiscent vacation days. We are heading into the February blues. The stretch between Christmas and Easter is long — it lacks in both sunshine and days off.

During this period, we will notice more sick days being taken, productivity suffering as employees become uncharged, and we may even witness an increase in people moving from job to job, hoping to get a few days break be-tween starting and finish-

The Atlantic provinces observe the fewest statutory holidays in Canada, with Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island bringing up the rear with only six observed days. The Western provinces and territories observe nine or more days, while Ontario and Quebec celebrate eight.

Just because our local governments haven't been able to do much to adjust this imbalance, it doesn't mean we can't impact our own staff and employees. Why not find your own unique way to help em-ployees find mental health respite in the dull days of winter.

Some ideas can include: Personal days. Provide a set number of personal days an employee can take them an opportunity for a much deserved break. If you have these days in your contract make sure you use them.

Watch out for Most Hell Bent On Skates

For the past three days I found myself in the grip of a second horrible, nasty flu since fall. I'm calling this one H2N2.

The last time, I suggested fellow sufferers plant yourselves on the couch and become flu divas for a day. The problem with trying this again in a three-month period is: a) everyone still remembers how much trouble you were last time, and b) well, that's it really.

I am happy to report though that my partner, Liz, is doing everything possible to help me recover by Saturday. The reason: Liz loves two things. Me. And hockey. I'm pretty sure in that order. Once a year she gets to have both together when her hockey league hosts its annual charity event, The Wives Game

The Wives Game is played by the spouses, partners and of the regular friends woman players. You don't have to be a wife to play. You don't even have to be female. The only criteria is you can't have any discernible knowledge of, ability in or talent for playing hockey. If you can't skate either, so much the better.

Last year, our male goalie had to be helped to the net by his girlfriend and propped into position, where I'm delighted to say he ended with a shutout. Sometimes, players refuse to come out for their turn, preferring to sit on the bench and chat, one woman saying, "What's the point? We can't score to save our Friends and partners of the players ante up $10 each to enter us, then sit on the sidelines and call out supportive things such as, "You going to lie there all night?' Some of us have dubbed the event "Mocking for Money."

Funds raised go to Gilda's Club, a fine organization providing care for cancer patients, making it all worthwhile. And playing hockey lets out a part of me that sits on the sidelines for the rest of the year. Twice I've taken home the trophy for "Most Hell Bent On Skates." And if my temperature goes below 101 come Saturday night, I'm looking for No. 3.

Thirsty? Try a nice box of water

HEIDI PATALANO Metro World News

CLIMATE There was a time when we thought being responsible meant drinking water and recycling the bottle it came in.

But today, a growing mass of evidence is pointing to how harmful the bottled water industry is for the economy and ecology of the modern world. Whether it's the amount of gas it takes to ship the water — the documentary film Tapped estimates that in the U.S. alone, 18 million barrels of oil are used every year to transport bottled water — or the toxins present in the plastic bottles, there is a realization that bottled water puts a serious strain on the environment.

Entrepreneur Benjamin

Boxed water is being encouraged as a replacement for bottled.

Gott sensed the tide was turning on bottled water back in March of 2008, so he came up with a brilliant concept that was previously non-existent in the $16-billion bottled water industry — boxed water.

The 950-millilitre containers are made from 85 per cent environmentally sustainable materials. Like bottled water brands Dasani and Aquafina, Boxed Water is purified tap water.

Since the containers are collapsible, shipping the cartons greatly reduces the carbon imprint generated from shipping plastic bottles

The Tara expedition will have travelled more than 150,000 kilometres when it's completed.

Breath of fresh thinking

Expedition seeks to link CO2 absorption and oceans

NADIA LODDO Metro World News

Science takes time, patience and stamina. In the middle of the Mediterranean, the schooner Tara is at the beginning of a three-year odyssey around the world: A 150,000-kilometre expedition to explore the largely unknown world of the oceans.

"Ninety per cent of the biological mass of the oceans is made of plankton," explains Spanish marine biology researcher Silvia Acinas, scientific co-ordinator for Tara.

"These organisms are responsible for absorbing 50 per cent of the CO2 emissions on the Earth and producing 50 per cent of the oxygen we breathe but we only know one per cent of them: This expedition is about discovering the remaining 99 per cent."

The uncertainty of current climate models has a great deal to do with this unknown life. As a matter of fact, oceans are the major factor influencing climate, working as carbon pumps to a greater extent than rainforests do.

Every other day, the boat stops for a 12-hour scientific station. Pumping, filtering, sorting and labelling: The five researchers on board have a long day ahead of them. Over a thousand litres of sea water are pumped on board and filtered in the wet lab to separate the different kind of sea plankton — viruses.

Plankton account for 90 per cent of the biological mass in oceans.

The Tara expedition will cross the Mediterranean Sea, Red Sea, Indian Ocean, Atlantic Ocean, Pacific Ocean, and Arctic Ocean and stop in 60 ports during its research mission.

bacteria and protista.

At the back of the boat, the oceanographic winch allows sea water sampling of up to 2,500 metres in depth, thanks to the special Niskin bottles.

"A very ingenious device because their lids can be closed at a given depth taking samples at an exact point of interest," explains French ocean engineer Hervé Le Goff.

The plankton on the surface of the water will not escape the meticulous scientists either. Nets a few metres long are thrown from the back of the boat. For some minutes they trail behind the boat like giant jellyfish, under the impatient eyes of the researchers, before being pulled back up and sampled. Otherpieces of scientific equipment are sunk to measure temperatunk to measure temperature.

ture and salinity and study the currents.

A few hundred samples are carefully labelled and preserved, either to be analyzed in the on-board dry lab or to be sent to the research centres on land. Every eight weeks a special parcel is sent in extremely rigorous conditions of temperature and time to get the plankton to destination safe and sound. This expedition will lead to the creation of a world-wide database of planktonic forms of life, along with supplying a great deal of information on currents, corals and pollution. But just as sampling is time-consuming, research

EI A recent decline in the number of Canadians claiming employment insurance is a positive sign, but represents only a fraction of the challenges facing the Canadian workforce, according to the research director of a Toronto think-tank.

Unlike Friday's 102-92 home win over the Law-ton-Fort Sill Cavalry — in which their starters scored 87 points — the Rainmen needed a spark from their bench and got it from Ievohn Shepherd, Adris DeLeon and Garry Gal-

"They changed the game for us," said Rainmen head coach Les Berry.

"It was huge. They played with a lot of energy, played excellent defence and scored at key times.'

That trio combined for 32 points, dropping 26 in the second half and a good chunk of those in the fourth quarter.

The Rainmen trailed 84-83 with 9:48 remaining, but grabbed the lead 19 seconds later on a jump shot by DeLeon. That basket was the start of a 24-15 run to end the game.

Shepherd, who didn't play a minute Friday, had 14 points, while DeLeon 10 and Gallimore eight.

Guard Tony Bennett had a team-high 25 points; Eric Crookshank had yet anoth-

They sure ain't the Aints

The New Orleans Saints are heading to their first Super Bowl after battering Brett Favre and beating the Minnesota Vikings 31-28 in overtime yesterday on unheralded Garrett Hartley's 40-yard field

Favre threw away Minnesota's best chance to win, tossing an interception deep in New Orleans territory in the closing seconds of regulation. Then the Saints won the coin toss and soon it was over.

The team that had no home five years ago after Hurricane Katrina ravaged its city and the Superdome overcame a slew of mistakes in the biggest game the Big Easy has ever seen.

"This is for everybody in this city," said coach Sean Payton, the architect of the Saints' turnaround. "This stadium used to have holes in it and used to be wet. It's not wet anymore. This is for the city of New Orleans.'

Forget the paper bag masks and that long history of losing started in 1967 Moments after Hartley's kick, they were toasting their hometown winners on Bourbon Street.

And in the Superdome, once a squalid refuge after Katrina, they boogied in the aisles as confetti covered the field.

Favre's last game?

Battered and beaten, Brett Favre limped off the field for perhaps the last time. His head down, the pained look on his face was brought on as much by an ill-advised late turnover as it was by a bone-picked quarterback for the Saints' renaissance.

the 1993 season.

"Brett prepared us, but now we've got another challenge in Peyton," safety Darren Sharper said.

The biggest error was made by Favre. Flushed from the pocket, he seemed to have room to run to set up a field goal.

Instead, the 40-year-old quarterback threw crossfield and was intercepted by Tracy Porter at the 22.

That finished off Minnesota's chance for its first Super Bowl trip in 33 years — and opportunity to win it for the first time.

New Orleans won the coin toss, Brees guided it to the Minnesota 22 and Hartley, suspended at the start of the season for using a banned stimulant, split the uprights 4:45 in-

Spencer himself was drawn to police work as a young man because of his father, who was a cop in their hometown of Garson, just outside Sudbury, Ont. "He was an honourable man, I suppose I wanted to follow in his footsteps."

Cash unfolds The List

Rosanne's new disc contains 'essential country' from father

It's one of those priceless documents that probably belongs in the Smithsonian Institute — a handwritten list on a single sheet of legal-size paper, front and back, with the heading "100 Essential Country Songs."

It was written by Johnny Cash while on tour, back in 1973. He spent an afternoon, pencil in hand, compiling it for his 18-year-old daughter Rosanne Cash.

And what did she do with it? She studied it carefully and then folded it up - yes, folded it, as in put a permanent crease in it - and stuck it in a box.

'I was just thinking, 'This is nice, I'm going to save it," Rosanne told Metro in an interview. "I didn't think of it being the holy grail of documents. I certainly didn't think about that when he gave it to me at 18.

"I wasn't thinking that Johnny Cash gave me the list. I was thinking that it was dad who gave me the list. It was a personal thing, to give me an idea about who we were as musicians."

Cash may have looked at the list once or twice in the 30 years after her father wrote it. She only remembers keeping it in a box with other bits and pieces of memorabilia. It moved with her from California to Nashville and to her present home in New York.

A couple of years ago,

Cash rediscovered the list while preparing for her Black Cadillac tour. It was time, she decided, to take some of the songs out of the

The result was her new CD. The List. It contains 12 songs off Johnny's list of essentials — Miss the Mississippi and You, Motherless Children, Sea of Heartbreak (with Bruce Springsteen), Take These Chains from my Heart, I'm Movin' On, Heartaches by the Number (with Elvis Costello), 500 Miles, Long Black Veil (with Jeff Tweedy), She's Got You, Girl From the North Country, Silver Wings (with Ru-whatever reasons. Cash has chosen to keep the identity of the other 88 secret, except for a few slips in interviews.

"It'll be in my lifetime," is the only answer she gives when asked when fans will learn the rest.

Cash has already started work on a followup to The List, which would contain another dozen or so of her father's choices. She says it's possible there could be a third List CD, but draws the line at that. So many of the songs simply don't suit her voice, style or gender.

When asked, she admits that her father included some of his own songs on the list, confirming I Walk the Line as one of them.

"My dad was very humble," she says. "He only included two of his own.

Rosanne also lets slip that Hank Williams' I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry and Woody Guthrie's This Land Is Your Land are also list members.

But it's a tease. She won't go further.

Cash does admit, however, to wishing she had asked her dad to revise it before he died.

"It is one of my great regrets in life that I didn't think to ask him to update it," she says.
When asked if anything released since 1973 that may have made an amended list, she responds with George Jones' hit He Stopped Loving Her Today, written by Jones.

And where is the list now?

"It's still in the box," Cash laughs. "I haven't put it under glass or under armed

Spoon full of success

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI for Metro Canada

Spoon's rise to the top of the indie pack can be attributed to one thing hard work.

The band has become a Billboard charting group, selling nearly 50,000 copies in the U.S. of last disc Ga Ga Ga Ga Ga in its first week of release, the old fashioned way - sticking it out until people take notice. It's something, says founding drummer Jim Eno, that new bands can't do.

I really wouldn't want to be a young band now," he says. "It's hard to get deals and labels aren't spending money.

Transference is the new album from Spoon.

The group released its first EP in 1994, and slowly built a following around scrappy, alternative rock. It took seven years, and a move to venerable inde-pendent label Merge records, until the endless touring began paying off.

"We toured from 1994 to 2001 in front of no one," Eno reveals. "Then, when we released Girls Can Tell, people started coming to our shows and starting liking our music."

In 2005, with the release of Gimmie Fiction and a move to smoother, cleaner pop, the band entered a new musical phase that continues to this day. The band's latest, Transference, is another pop gem. It's lower kev than Ga Ga Ga Ga Ga. but has the same infectious hooks and polished performances that's marked the last couple of discs.

Its more stripped down sound is thanks to the band producing the record themselves. Despite Eno's second career producing other bands, it's the first time Spoon has worked this way themselves. The result, says Eno, is an album that's "more us."

There's no outside influences; no person who wants to put a stamp on it," he says. "It's how a Spoon record should be."

Rob Lowe will leave the ABC drama Brothers&Sisters at the end of the season, his publicist said Friday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CURTAIN CALL The German rock band Scorpions is bringing down the curtain on a career spanning more than four decades.

The band, known for its early 1990s hit Wind of Change among others, said on its website yesterday that "we have reached the end of the road."

It said it would end its career with a final album Sting in the Tail, to be released in March - and a tour that will start in Germany in May and take it across the world "over the next few years."

Guitarist Rudolf Schenker founded the band in Hannover in 1965. Singer Klaus Meine joined a few years later. Both men are 61.

Angels and duds

Legion

Director: Scott Stewart Stars: Paul Bettany, Dennis Quaid Classification: STO Rating: 🕮

ADAM NAYMAN

Somebody up there has a sense of humour. How else to explain Paul Bettany starring in duelling new releases as both Charles Darwin and a badass angel bent on keeping God from destroying humanity?

Descending from the heavens into the L.A. night like Kyle Reese, Bettany's Michael is bent on making it out to the desert, to a truck stop housing a twangy Sarah Connor manque (Adri-anne Palicki). Precisely why this dust-bunny's unborn child holds the key to humanity's salvation in the face of extermination is a question never addressed in Peter Schink and director Scott Stewart's screenplay.

Paul Bettany plays an angel saving mankind in Legion.

A few other questions: Why does God's plan to eradicate his most beloved creations include so much stalling? (The first act plays like Dawn of the Dead, with possessed citizens assaulting the compound and getting shot up by Bettany and his motley crew of human pals, including Tyrese Gibson and a hookhanded Charles S. Dutton.)

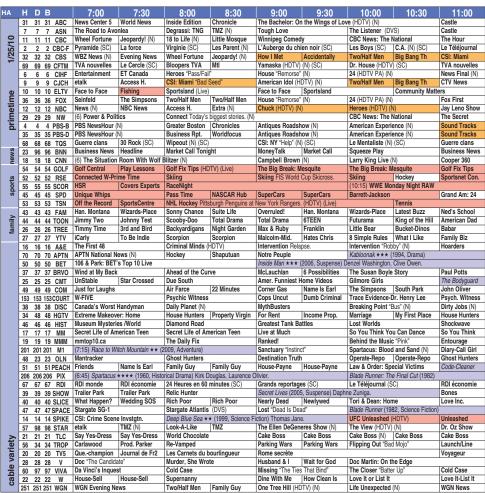

Why does Michael's winged nemesis Gabriel (Kevin Durand) stop in the middle of his Divine errand to have a fistfight? When did Dennis Quaid go from the poor man's Harrison Ford to an ornery supporting role in mid-January studio dreck?

Legion is atrociously made, but what really rankles are its thinly veiled reactionary politics (in short: armed militias, good; abortions, not so much).
